5. MARION MEWBURN

I am a ceramic artist and work from my studio near Millers Flat. I am known for my whimsical, funky but very functional teapots, but do lots of other work too. My studio is full of 'experiments'. I am not a shop as such, but I do welcome visitors. It is best to call first, to see if I am home.

Directions: after crossing the Millers Flat bridge from the highway, turn right at Faigans Cafe, (direction Beaumont Station). Drive for exactly 5km, and I am on the left just after the Millennium track turn-off. The road turns to gravel half way, that means you are on the right track!!

6. DENIS LITCHFIELD

Denis, a gem cutter has a very interesting studio where he will show you the stones he mined in Australia and then cuts in Central Otago. He specialises in sapphires which range in colour from light green to deep indigo blue and zircon's which range from clear to red. A well-cut stone will dazzle with colour and life. Visit Denis to learn more about gems.

8. MARION VIALADE

I am a self taught artist, born in France and now living in Alexandra. A passion for drawing first led me to explore printmaking and illustrating techniques. As I delved further into these disciplines I started getting interested in colour and light and through painting (acrylic and gouache) I am able to experiment with both of these. My work is about places, people and objects that move me - but overall it is about human emotion, mine and others.

10. ANNEMARIE HOPE CROSS

Historic Processes Photography

Annemarie is a photographic artist who hand crafts images using the earliest methods of the photographic pioneers. Frequently working without a camera, Annemarie mixes chemicals by hand and coats the paper before creating each unique image outdoors. She also makes photographs with historic cameras and exhibits in various Galleries and Museums around New Zealand and in the UK.

13. HELEN BLAIR

I like to paint with a painting knife and some brush work creating textural impressionist style work. I see tapestries of colour in the dense mossy forests, wild flowered fields, mountains, grasses and dense thickets. There is so much beauty around us I just want to capture it all. My studio is in a barn. I love the Central Otago Landscape there is so much variety and change in the seasons here.

15. ROSS COWIE STUDIO 5

A lifelong interest in art has been maintained during a busy business career. I specialise mainly in printmaking having been part of a strong school of printers that emerged from the Otago Art Society. This interest has not precluded me from working in other mediums, including acrylic, charcoal, pencil and ink and ceramic sculpture. The latter has presented me with the opportunity to expand my love of sculptural works and experiment with mixed media. Since moving to Clyde permanently, I have continued running small art classes.

18. MELANIE EADE

My background in fine art, graphic design and retail design is strongly reflected in my recent works. The use of form and line, such as buildings, bridges and the use of perspective is the direct influence of growing up with a father who was an architect. This illustrative style requires me to simplify my composition giving it a wonderfully bold, colourful and print like quality.

20. OLAF MERINGHAUSEN

Olaf Meringhausen says his work is a journey through lines. He is inspired by his natural environment but is also influenced by experiences from his former life in Germany. He works in metal but integrates other materials to give colour and life. The welds, cuts and abrasions on the surface of the metal are as much a part of the sculpture as the innovative work he creates.

21. JANE WHITAKER

I would describe my paintings as 'impressionistic'. My enduring fascination is with fleeting moments in time – such as a racing shadow over a mountain range. As well as landscapes, I am currently working on several portraits of Naseby residents, with the intention of capturing something of the personality, as well as the likeness, of the sitter. I work mainly in oils, water colour and pastel – but also use any other medium that I feel helps to capture the land or its people.

24. HUGH DERHAM

Hugh is a photographer who has specialised in large format graphic displays for tourism projects.

His gallery has two themes, New Zealand alpine landscapes and birds and African wildlife. Most of the New Zealand Landscapes are currently from Canterbury High Country. What is unique is that 41 images are printed onto glass. There is one large mural printed in vinyl 2.4m high and 4m wide, used as wallpaper.

25. MURRAY SHEPPARD

Murray's father owned his own furniture design/ cabinet making business so from an early age Murray was fortunate to spend hours having fun in his father's workshop. After leaving school Murray got involved in farming and the Stock and Station industry. Upon retirement in 2003 it seemed natural for him to return to his childhood interest - working with wood. Murray creates both functional works like bowls and platters as well as decorative, sculptural works of art.

26. JOANNE DEAKER

I believe in the power of images to uplift. They help us remember the good within us and within our world in spite of how the world might sometimes appear. I aim to create images that do this (and classes that teach it). View a selection of originals, archival prints and cards, online or phone to arrange an appointment to visit my home studio.

27. RACHEL HIRABAYASHI

The surface of the canvas is where I try to intermesh an idea with a recognizable visual form. Layers of pigment and paint act as a filter for my feelings for a place. Most images are based on memory, something that has made an impression on me, either visually or emotionally.

My works in metal are playful and they show my enjoyment of the metalworking process.

Hullabaloo art space is a contemporary art gallery based in the beautiful Cromwell Heritage Precinct on the shores of Lake Dunstan. Established in 2007, Hullabaloo art space is an artist run initiative with an exhibiting artist on duty to welcome you and advise on artworks. The artists involved are all local to Central Otago and are exhibiting some of the best local art; sculpture, painting, photography, wood carving, ceramics, printmaking, multimedia and jewellery. The gallery is a spacious white walled space, which is rehung monthly keeping the visitor experience new and fresh. The main hang is complemented by the changing solo exhibitions in a designated 'space' within the gallery. Solo shows happen every 3 weeks and allow the artists to explore new work or build on current ideas and are always varied and interesting.

30. GAIL DE JONG

Celebrated Central Otago Landscape painter Gail de Jong's richly layered works convey a significant and contemporary interpretation of the area, especially Bannockburn and the Nevis. She uses her own unique techniques, in combination with traditional processes associated with the painting of oil on canvas. Otago born and bred, Gail has roamed inland valleys and deserted goldfields since childhood. This deep connection with the land resonates in her work, adding to the integrity of each original painting. See a collection of Gail's paintings at Octa Gallery in the Cromwell Heritage Precinct.

35. ROBERT FRANKLIN

I was a part-time studio potter for a decade in the 1970's. Some four years ago I was encouraged to once again sit at a pottery wheel and this released dramatic results. My knowledge and experience in studio pottery some thirty years ago remains within me in the head and hands but the pieces produced were like nothing that had gone before. I now utilise that knowledge to create works in many of the genres of ceramics including, Raku, Saggar Firing, Stoneware and Porcelain and I exhibit locally and nationally. My work is strongly influenced by both Japanese and Chinese early ceramics. My work is an expression of form, finish and texture, more of the fire, and less of the glaze
